THE VISITORS' GUIDE

THE GOVERNMENT BUILDINGS.

Parks, Squares, Statues, Gardens, and Other Points of Attraction.

THE WAY TO REACH THEM.

Washington is fast becoming the most attractive city of the country. As the Capital of the Nation it presents more objects of interest to the visiter than any other on the continent, and a brief directory of its prominent points will be of service to the vast number of persons who annually resort to the political metropolis. For it is estimated that over three hundred thousand strangers pay a visit every year to this city to behold the varied objects of interest which so thickly stud the historic 'Ten Miles Saugro.'

The System of Numbering Houses.

Numbers are displayed over the entrances to all houses, and the decimal system, as adopted in Philadelphia, is used—one hundred numbers being allotted to each source or block—commencing at First street west, running west, First street east, running cast, A street northruculing north, and A street south running south. The odd numbers are always on the right-hand side going from the Capitol, and the even numbers on the left-hand side. The city is divided into four quarters or sections, northesset and northwest, southeast and southwest, the streets being designated accordingly; those running north and south numerically, and those running north and south numerically, and those running cast and west by the letters of the alphabet, the dividing lines being North and South Capitol streets, running on a line due north and south from the Capitol and East Capitol street, and the continuation on the same west of the Capitol, running due east and west. The System of Numbering Houses.

The Capitol.

This great building is the central point of the original listrict, and is the largest edifice in the country. Its centre marks the Meredian of Washington. The middle portion, immediately under the dome, is the part first built. It was partially destroyed by the British in 1814, but was completely restored by 1827. It incloses the "crypt"—where the remains of Washington were intended to be placed, the Library, the Rotunda, the old representatives Hail, now the Gallery of Statuary, and the old Senate Chamber, now the Supreme Court-room. The old Supreme Court-room, in the first story, is now occupied by the Law Branch of the Library. The corner-stone of the Capitol extension—the north and south wings—was laid July 4, 1851, Daniel Webster delivering the oration of the occusion from the balcony of the Library. The south wing contains the House of Representatives and the north wing the Senate Chamber. The Rotunda is distinguished for its historic paintings, for the Iamous bronze doors, with their aito reliefs, and for Erumidi's freesoings. In the Hall of Statuary are the natural pictures in Potomac marble, representing fases of certain American statesmen—a picturesque freak of nature. From the little rotunda, immediately north of the great rotunda, the staircase to the top of the dome begins its winding way. From the top of the come, or as far as the visitor can ascend, the view of the surrounding country is magnificent. The Capitol grounds, which formerly were homely and formal in appearance, have been transformed into a beautiful park and are now most exquisitely beautiful. The east base of the Capitol Is 80½ feet above ordinary low tide in the Potomac. The otal height from east base to the top of the statue 307½ feet. This crest is 360 feet hugher than the west gate of the grounds, and stream of the grounds and largest public building in the world, and in many respects the costilex and handsomest. It is moreover the growth of less than a century—a fact which adds to its beauty and interest. The origi The White House.

The White House.

From the west balcony of the Capitol, looking down Pennsylvania avenue, the White Bouse is seen rearing its snowy-hued walls above the dense mass of foliage that embowers it, like a gigantic calla lily springing up amid its enfolding green blades. Were it not for the partly intervening Treasury building the view of the White House from the Capitol would be full and complete. The White House is the center of "Ip-town," as the Capitol is the center of "Ip-town," as the Capitol is the center of "Ip-town," it is beautifully located, the view from the south windows covering the whole southern from to the city, as the view from the north up Sixteenth street west exhibits the best part of the Northwest section to the gaze. The White House is a copy of the palace of the Duke of Leinster at Dublin, with the addition of a large porch on the north front, which was added during Andrew Jackgon's the Duke of Leinster at Dublin, with the addition of a large porch on the north front, which was added during Andrew Jackeon's administration. The reservation in which it stands embraces nearly $1 acres. The main entrance is on the north, reached by the Pennsylvanja avenue cars. It is two stories high on the north, is built of white free-stone 170 feet long by $6 wide. It contains on the first floor the famous Green, Red. Blue and East rooms, the State Dining Room and the reat conservatories. The Blue Room is the President's official recution room and the drawing room of the tades of his family. The East Room, originally designed for a banquet hall, and so used as late as 1837, and in the latter part of the century used as a drying room for clothes by Mrs. President Adams, is the largest and most noted room in the building. It is 22 feet high, 80 feet long and 40 feet wide. It is open to visitors everday except Sundays. Upstairs are their Cabinet room, the private offices, the President's office, the library and family apartments. All these rooms, except the latter, are open to visitors, by special permission, at suitable hours.

Lafayette Square.

Due north from the White House is Lafayette Square, the first public reservation in Washington that was improved. It contains the equestrian statue of Andrew Jackson, by Clark Mills. Many of its trees are old forest monarchs, hundreds of years old. It is in part a specimen of the old formal landscape gardening so fashionable in England two hundred years ago, a style that was imported into this country. Lafayette Square was, one hundred years ago, part of a graveyard that enclosed the square north, on which St. John's Church is built, and the square east on which are situated the Attorney-General's office and Riggs Bank (both in the building formerly used as the United States Bank), Commodore Decatur's house, comer Fifteenth and a-half and H streets, and the old Club House, near which Philip Barton Key was killed by Daniel E. Slokles, Momber of Congress from New York. The last bodies from this graveyard were not removed until 1819. Lafayette Square.

St. John's P. E. Church.

St. John's P. E. Church.

St. John's P. E. Church, which has often been called the State Church because more Presidents have worshipped there than at any other, stands at the corner of H and sixteenth streets. It was built in 1816 and enlarged in 1820. In it have worshipped fresidents Madison, Monroe, John Quincy Adams, (though the latter was a Congregationalist) Mariin Van Buren (though the belonged to the Butch Reformed Church) Harrison, Tyler, Folk, Taylor, Filmore (though the latter was a Unitarian). Pierce, Buchanan and Arthur. Presidents Lincoln, Johnson and Grant have also attended Divine serevices, althouga not stendily, its interior reminds one very forcibly of the old, dim English country Episcopal churches.

The Treasury Department.

The Treasury Department.

The Treasury Department is east of the White House and extends the whole length of the Iront between Pennsylvania and New York avenues. It is 582 long by 300 teet wide. The central east portion is built of freestone, rebuilt in 1836-41, while the other parts were commenced in 1855 and built of granite. The cash Room in this building is a beautiful apartment in the north wing, the entrance to which is from the north porch. The vanits are under the Cash Hoom and can be seen on a written permit given by the Treasurer of the United States, whose office is in the northeast angle on the first floor. This permit must be shown the cashier, who will detail guides to take the visitor into the great builton chests of the country. The old State Department used to be on the site occupied by the northeast corner of the Treasury.

War, Navy and State Department.

This edifice, once named by a Washington lournalist the "Triune Bullding," occupies the west side of the President's reservation, immediately west of the White House. The State Department occupies the south part, while the War Department occupies the online northern half. It is a new and very handsome structure. The most beautiful 100m in the whole building is consected to be the library of the State Department, with south front, from whose windows the eye can sweep un interruptedly down the Potomac to Mount Vernon and far over the Virginia bills. The building is in Hailan Renaissance. It is 567 feet long and 343 feet wide. Its greatest height is 128 feet, and the flag, floating over the central portion, flaunts in the breeze higher up than any other flag in the city, not excepting those above the Senate and House of Representatives. The cost of the building was five millons of dollars, about three times a much as the White House, and, we think is uch as the Capitol. War, Navy and State Department.

Department of Justice.

Department of Justice.

Immediately north of the Treasury building and lust across the street is the Department of Justice. This building was originally erected as the Freedman's Bank. The square in which it is erected is a historic one. On the same street, at the east corner, stands fligs? Bank, which was built for the accomdation of the Washington branch of the old United States Bank. Just around the corner is the residence of Secretary of State Diane, who occupies the house which was formerly the old Washington Clab House, in front of which Philip Barton Rey was shot by Sickels. The tree, under which the dead man's body lay, is still standing, although its bark had been completely removed by relic bunters. At the northwest corner of the square, above the Commissary-General's Office, is the House made famous by the ownership of Commodore Decatur, where "Dolly" Madison lived and reigned so long a social queen after her husband's term as Fresident expired.

The Washington Monsument

The Washington Monument, The Washington Monument.

Immediately south of the White House stands the Washington Monument, the loftiest structure erected by man, and the most imposing obelisk ever constructed. It is 555 teet above its base, which is 42 feet above tide-water. Its corner-stone was laid July 4, 1848, and the capatone, forming the apex, was placed in position December 6, 1884. In it are 181 blocks of inserted stones or copper, gifts from various countries and societies. Thetotal cost will be over $1.350,000. It is situated in what will ultimately be a beautiful park.

The Naval Observatory.

To the west of the Washington Monument on the highest elevation that borders the north bank of the river, between St. Elizabeth's Heights and Georgetown College, stands the Naval Observatory. The hill on which it stands is famous for having been the camping ground of Washington Braddock and the inter's army, when on their march to the fatal field, where the English General fell a victim to his self-conceit and vanity. Tradition also points out this hill as the decisive battle-ground between the District Indians and the mysterious Susquehannas. This observatory contains the largest refracting telescope in the world, next to the new equatorial just built for the Lick Observatory. By its sid that most interesting if not greatest, astronomical discovery of the country was made, the moons of Mars. The entrance the Obser vatory is at E and Twenty-third streets northwest. The Herdic cabs go to Twenty-second and G streets. The Naval Observatory.

The Agricultural Department. This building is situated east of the Mornment, it is inclosed by the most beautiful and glowing flower garden in the country, and the grounds contain the most complete Alboretum probably in the United States, Attached to this Department are the Experimental Gardens, whose offices are immediately west of the main building. The Belt Line cars go right past the grounds.

The Smithsonian Institute and National Museum.

The Smithsonian Instatute and National Museum.

The visitor may obtain considerable entertainment and instruction by spending several hours in the Smithsonian Institution and National Museum. These are two handsome big buildings, situated in the immense park lying south of B street, between Seventh and Twelfth streets. There is simply a mammoth free museum, owned and operated by the U. S. Government for the collection of everything in nature, science, literature, history and art that is rare, interesting and valuable, and the displaying of them to the public. As one enters the hall of the National Museum the first object of interest is a collection of the personal effects of George Washington, including his clothing, family china and camp utensils. Beyond this stretch row after row of glass show-cases, in which are displayed collections of almost every conceivable articles. The artist will find rare etchings, specimens of the engraver's art in its perfection. The surgeon will see whole cases full of keen and glistening implements of his calling from the smallest and most complex to the largest and simplest. The numismatist may revel in a collection of rare colns, from the freshly coined dollar of the day to the copper cast that bears the stump of the Casars. The geologist will find himself in a maze of specimens dug from every section of the country. The ethnologist may pore for heurs over the models of the Cliff houses and the homes of the Aborigines. The lover of antiquities in general will have an unbounded range of subjects, from the Egyptian mummies, a thousand years old, and relies of Pompell to the arms and implements of the early dwellers in America. The lover of brica-brac and fine china will discover a paradise of earthen productions. The dain-liest wares from Limoges, Büccarat, Hungary and Germany will please the eye, and the process of manufacture is displayed. In the Smithsonian Building the student of taxidermy will find case after case of birds, beasts, fish and reptiles stuffed and in jars of al

Passing eastward from the Museum, over the railroad bridge that spans Sixth street, and through the pretty park lying between Maine and Missouri avenues, the visitor comes Maine and Missouri avenues, the visitor comes to the entrance on Third street, last south of Pennsylvania avenue, of the Botanical Gardens. These interesting grounds are open daily from 9 in the morning to 6 in the evening. They were established fifty years ago. The conservatories are filled with the choicest and rarest foreign plants. Around the gardens are extensive collections of trees and shrubs. In the centre of the lawn facing the centre conservatory is the famous Bartholdi Fountain that attracted so much attention at the Philadelphia Centennial.

The Peace Monument. The Peace Monument.

Just half way across the Avenue from the northeast angle of the Botanical Garden and at the west foot of the Capitol Grounds is the Peace Monument. This was designed by Admiral Porter in honor of the dead soldiers and saliors of the late war. It is of marble and cost, with pedestal and platform, $41,000. It is proposed to remove this monument to one of the squares on the northwest section.

Retracing ours teps we find

The Printing and Engraving Bureau. The great money mill of the Government is located at the corner of Fourteenth and B streets southwest, southeast from the Monument and southwest from the Agricultural Bureau. It is reached by the Belt Line Cars and is opened to visitors every day.

Davy Durns' Cottage. One of the curlosities of Washington is old Davy Burns' cotrage, on Seventeenth street, near the river. It may be reached by the drive south of the President's House or by the Metropolitan or Avenue line of cars. Next door to it is General Van Ness' once stately mansion, where he brought his bride, Marcia Burns, one of the original heiresses of Washington.

Corcoran Art Gallery. The Corcoran Art Gallery is at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Seventeenth street opposite the War. Navy and State Department. It is open Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays free; on other days (except Sundays) a small admission fee is charged. This gallery, although not to be compared with the great Old World galleries, is nevertheless a very creditable institution for so new a country as the United States. It contains among other original objects Fowers' great statue of the "Greek Slave" "Greek Slave."

The Louise Home.

The Louise Home is a beautiful building at the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Fliteenth street, near Scott Circle. It has extensive grounds, beautifully embellished, and is a unique establishment. It is a memorial to the wife and daugner of Mr. W. W. Corcoran, and is interded as a home for ladies of education and birth and refinement, who have been reduced to poverty from affuence. The Louise Home.

The Columbian University. Coming down Fifteenth street from the Louise Home, at the corner of Fifteenth and H streets, the visitor sees the Columbian University, which occupies the of the old Griswold Mausion. This university was in corporated as Columbian College in 1821, and is under the special-supervision of the Baptist Church. It is an institution famous for the discipline and thoroughness of its natruction.

The Postoffice Department. The Postoffice Department.

The General Postoffice Department is on the square bounded by E. F. Seventh and Eighth streets. It is a handsome building airhough its proximity to its larger and bolder brother, the Patent Office, somewhat obscures its great size and tends to lessen its beauty. It different bureaus possesses great interest to the visitor, but the Dead Letter Office is particularly the one to be observed. The collectical of curiosities taken from the mails in transit, as specimens of the uses to which the Nation's postal convergences are put, is both varied and unique. Everything unmailable, from an Indian tomuhawk to a stuffed kangaroo, is to be seen in this collection, and it is still growing.

or as it is popularly termed, the Patent Office occupies the two squares between Seventh and Ninth and F and G streets. It is built in the Doric style, and is an admirable specimen of the boldiest and coldest of the Greek styles. It contrasts finely with the General Postoffice, which is Corin, thian, the most ornate of the pure Greek modes of architecture. The curiosities of the Patent Office are the model rooms, where many thousands of themselves to the gaze in every stage of invention. This building, like most of the Government offices, is open to the visitor from 5a, m. to 2 p. m. The libraries of the Interior Department are well worthy of a visit. The great Inauguration ball at Lincoln's second term took place in the Patant Office.

Marine Barracks-Navy-Yard. Marine Barracks—Navy-Yard.

The Marine Brrracks are situated on Eighth street southeast, between G and H. Several squares further south the walls of the Navy-Yard rise before the gaze. This Navy-Yard was in its time the most famous one in the country, the second largest ship of the line in the Navy-Yard having been built here, as well as the famous crulsers. He Essox, the Wasp and others. It is to be converted into the great ordnance factory of the country, and the visitor will find hundreds of objects herein to interest him, especially the making of the steel rifled cannon.

Medical Museum.

The large brick building on Tenth street, between E and F streets, with a plastered front, painted brown, was once a Baptist church. It was converted about the beginning of the war into a theatre known the country over as Ford's, and it was in a private box there in April, 1865, that John Wilkes Booth killed President Lincoln. The latter was carried to a house just opposite, where he died. A marble tablet in front of the house, No. 516 Tenth street, commemorates this fact. The theatre was then sequestrated by the Government and turned into the Medical Museum attached to the Surgeon-General's office. A large and handsome building has since been erected in the Smithsonian Park, just east of the National Museum, which, is now used for the Medical Museum. It is; full of interesting surgical relies of the war, and has the largest medical library in the world. Among the curiosities within its walls is the articulated skeleton of Guiteau, the assassin of President Garfield, Coming down Tenth street from the former Medical Museum the visitor will not fall to inspect the massive and heautiful Fost Building, in which is situated the office of The Capitat. This is the largest newspaper establishment south of Philadelphia and east of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. Three of the leading and most influential journals in the country—one morning, one evening and one independent Sunday paper – have their home in this, establishment. Medical Museum

The Geological Bureau. The Geological Survey is located on Fstreet, near the Ebbitt House. The Interior Department building, immense as it is, is entirely too small for the accommodation of its bureaus, two of which, besides the Educational and Geological Bureaus (Agriculture and Pension) are located in other quarters. These two last bureaus are among the largest under the Government.

The District Buildings. The visitor, after leaving the Centre Market, will proceed down the Avenue to First street and northward up that street two squares will come to the District building, where are the offices of the Commissioners and other officials of the District.

The City Hall. Due north of the Avenue and closing up Four-and-a-half street at that point, is the City Hall. This is a large and commodious building, built for use rather than show, and now occupied by the District Courts. Just in front and to the south of the City Hall is a column of white stone, surmounted by a marble figure of Lincoln.

Judiciary Square. The City Hall stands on the south front of Judiciary Square, one of the finest parks in the city. The City Jail used to stand on the northeast corner of the square, which runs from Fifth to Fourth and from D street and Louisiana avenue to G street—three long, full

The Pension Office.

The new Pension building extends nearly the entire width of Judiciary Square, from Fourth to Fifth streets and from G, nearly to F street. It is by far the largest building in the world devoted to the examination and settlement of claims for pensions. It is built of red brick, and cost several hundred thousand dollars. In it was given President Cleveland's languration Ball. It can be reached by the Metropolitan and Belt Line cars.

The Centre Market. The Centre Market occupies squares south of the Avenue, bounded by Bst. on the south, Seventh street on the east and Ninth street on west. It is a very handsome market building, excelled in beauty, and probably in size, by none in the world. It is the cleanest and the best, while also the cheapest market in America.

The Government Printing Office. The Government Printing Office.

The Government Printing office is in a northeast direction from the Pension Office, at the corner of H and North Capitol streets. It is by far the largest winting establishment in the world, and is full of interest to visitors. The cost of running it goes up into millions annually, and the money is well spent. It would take columns to merely outline the gigantic establishment, which employes in its busiest season over 2,000 people. It is reached by the Columbia line of street cars.

Howard University. Howard University is the first place in this country to provide for the higher education of the colored people generally. It is on Seventh street extended, just above Boundary, and occupies a high and picturesque site, overlooking the whose city. It is built of large cream-colored brick, specially manufactured for the occasion.

The Old Soldiers' Home. The Old Soldiers' Home.

The Old Soldiers' Home lies about a mile beyond Howard University, out Seventh street extended, and is reached by the same conveyances, namely, the Ninth and Seventh street car lines. Its main building is of marble, 200 feet front with a very high tower. The view from its tower surpasses any similar view in the neighborhood. A statue of General Scott adorns the grounds. There is also a National Cemetery with several thousand Union dead buried there.

The Deaf Mute College. Returning from Mt. Olivet the visitor will pass near by and in full sight of the Deaf mute College, which lies on the north side of Boundary street, at the north end of Eighth street northeast. It is reached by cab or the H street line of cars. It is the most prominent deaf mute college in the world.

St. Elizabeth's. Across the Anacosta River, due south from the Navy-Yard, is St. Elizabeth's, or the Gov-ernment's Hospital for the Insane. It lies on the top of a hill, having a beautiful view of the surrounding country. There are over one thousand patients in this asylum. It is reached by a pleasant carriage drive.

Bladensburg. Outside of the original District are several places of great interest to the tourist, notably Bladensburg, in Maryland, on the B. & O. R. R., seven miles from Washington. It is an old town, famous for being a hundred years ago the largest commercial city in Maryland; also for its Spa Springs, and for its associations as a favorite duelling ground in the days when the "code of honor" was in force,

Across the Potomac, opposite Georgetown, and reached by cab across either the Long or the Aqueduct Bridges, is Arlington, once the home of the Lees, and now the largest national cemetery in the country. Over 16,000 soldiers are buried here. The place is exceedingly beautiful and the view of Washington grand.

The Washington Barracks. The Washington Barracks.

The Washington Barracks or the Arsenal, as it is commonly called, are located at the foot of Four and a-half street southwest, the grounds extending over what used to be the penitentiary. It is interesting among other reasons for being the enclosure in which Mrs. Surratt and the Assassination prisoners were hanged. The band which is stationed here give frequent concerts in the summer that are largely attended. Reached by the Metropolitan (Four-and-a-half-street branch and the Seventh street line, via the Anacostia line of atreet cars.

of pure Cod Liver Oil with Hypo-phosphites of Lime and Soda is almost as palatable as milk. Children enjoy it rather tha otherwise. A MARVELLOUS FLESH PRODUCER it is indeed, and the little lade and lessles who take cold casily, may be fortified against a cough that might prove serious, by taking Scott's Emulsion after their meals during the winter season. Reware of substitutions and imitations.

Seven miles from Washington down the Potomac, reached by bent or by rail, is the old city of Alexandria. It contains among other objects of inferest the clurch where Washington worshipped, the house that Braddock lived in before he went on his fatal campaign, the lodge of Masons to which Washington was attached, the store where the famous General Turner Ashby sold dry goods for many years, and many other objects of interest. Cabin John Bridge.

Cabin John Bridge, spanning the chasm of Cabin John Creek, about eight miles from Rock Creek Bridge, is the largest single stone arch bridge in the world. Five miles above Cabin John Bridge are the Great Falls of the Potomac. The scenery is magnificent. Reached by cab.

Mount Vernon.

Fourteen miles below Washington down the river, reached by boat, is Mount Vernon, the home and grave of Washington. Visitors can reach it by the steamer Corcorau, Captain Blake, every day. Georgetown University.

Georgetown University is the leading Catholic college in the United States. It is located on the west side of Prospect street, George-town, on, perhaps, the most beautiful site on the Potomac. Its buildings and grounds are very handsome. Beached by the Metropolitan The District Jail. The District Jail.

On the reservation which lies immediately north of E street southeast and fronts on the Anacostia River is a huge quadrangular pile of red brick, known as the District Jail. This building is especially noticeable for being the one wherein the assassin of a President was hanged. Just south of it is the City Asylum. It is reached by cab or carriage, or on footfrom the termination of the railway and herdie lines.

Save Your Hair

BY a timely use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. D This preparation has no equal as a dressing. It keeps the scalp clean, cool, and healthy, and preserves the color, fullness, and beauty of the hair.

"I was rapidly becoming hald and gray; but after using two or three bottles of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair grew thick and glossy and the original color was restored."—Melvin Aldrich, Canaan Centre, N. H. "Some time ago I lost all my hair in consequence of mensles. After due waiting, no new growth appeared. I then used Ayer's Hair Vigor and my hair grew Thick and Strong.

It has apparently come to stay. The Vigor is evidently a great aid to nature."

— J. B. Williams, Floresville, Texas. "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past four or five years and find it a most satisfactory dressing for the hair. It is all I could desire, being harmless, causing the hair to retain its natural color, and requiring but a small quantity to render the hair easy to arrange."

Mrs. M. A. Bailey, 9 Charles street, Hayerhill, Mass.

"I have been using Ayer's Hair Vigor for several years, and believe that it has caused my hair to retain its natural color."—Mrs. H. J. King, Dealer in Dry Goods, &c., Bishopville, Md.
